Personal Connectivity:

Developing Relationships That Fuel Your Business

Computer systems network - people build relationships. Top executives will tell you time and again that the most important skill they have is the ability to forge relationships. And more often than not, your ability to get things done depends on what you get from others. At this powerful new workshop, you will learn how to make a positive and lasting impression on others. The art of developing relationships will teach you to work better with others and in turn, get more out of them and yourself.

What you will learn:

- ◆ How your interpersonal skills affect others—and what you can do about them
- ◆ Making a strong first impression: introducing yourself and meeting others
- ◆ Establishing rapport: making others feel valued

Chris Bye and Samantha Bluhm of the Navigator Group will be presenting. Bye is originally from River Falls, and teaches business classes and entrepreneurship at the University of St. Thomas. Bluhm is a graduate of UW-River Falls and has worked as a Marketing Consult in a wide variety of industries.

Other Business Breakfast Highlights:

- New Chamber Member Introductions
- Business-to-Business Networking (Try out your new skills!)
- Your topic feedback for future Business Breakfasts
- Door Prizes
